

SAH KAH TAY

"The Land Where the Sun Shines Down"

COLFAX, CALIFORNIA

IF YOU are looking for gracious living in a health-giving climate you will find it at Sah Kah Tay, the Indian name for "Where the sun shines down."

Sah Kah Tay is set high on a sunny hill at an altitude of 2500 feet, below the cold of the high peaks and above the fogs of the valleys. Broad verandas, some glassed in, others open to the sunlight and the stimulating fragrance of the pines, overlook the historically romantic American River. Beyond, higher mountains, and yet higher, reach in a haze of blue to snow-topped Sierras. Down the hill through pines and oaks lie the vineyards and orchard. From every window of the house is a beautiful view of the mountains.

There are certain things in life for which it is impossible to find a substitute. Should your taste run to quiet comfort and the charm of seclusion; if you care for well planned, balanced meals, you will find them at Sah Kah Tay.

If you are a devotee of winter sports a short drive of a half hour or less on winding roads overlooking lakes and canyons brings you to the land of skiing.
